Collision detection is the computational problem of detecting the intersection of two or more objects. While collision detection is most often associated with its use in video games and other physical simulations, it also has applications in robotics. In addition to determining whether two objects have collided, collision detection systems may also calculate time of impact (TOI), and report a ...

Okay, thanks for clarifying that :) I'm still not getting the correct answer, though. The correct answer, according to the solutions manual, is 7.1 m/s (which is the answer I get for  $v_{AB}$ ). When the solutions manual decomposes the x-direction, they use the values for car B, which I don't understand (since in my head, car B moves only in the y-direction).
